Wolfpack offensive tackle suspended after botched Gatorade dumping

University of Nevada all-WAC offensive tackle Mike Gallett has been suspended for the remainder of the 2009 football season for what head coach Chris Ault is calling a necessary reprimand. Ault, who logged his 200th career victory as a head football coach last week versus Louisiana Tech, managed to escape Nevada's Mackay Stadium without a Gatorade shower from his players. Gallett, a strong believer in the Gatorade shower tradition in football, unsuspectingly stormed into Ault's office Monday morning, yelled "better late than never" and gave his head coach a belated 200th career victory Gatorade shower.

"Mike is still a member of our football program," Ault said. "He'll be sitting out the remainder of this season after that total dick move he pulled in my office. I mean seriously, a Gatorade shower in an office? You'd have to be an idiot to think that was a good idea."

Despite the suspension, the junior tackle has continued to stand by his actions. "It's a milestone victory for coach," Gallett said. "I think the real crime here is that we didn't just give him the Gatorade shower on the field when it happened. We carried him off the field and everything, but no Gatorade shower? What the hell is that?"

With plenty of time off in his near future, Gallett plans to spend his free time catching up on some of his favorite TV series, particularly Desperate Housewives and Gilmore Girls.

Evening of New Mexico State loss sets Logan record for alcohol sales

Last Saturday's loss to perennial WAC doormat New Mexico State saw an all-time high in alcohol sales within the city of Logan as local Aggie fans took out their frustrations over their team's loss on their livers. "When the wins are as hard to come by as they have been up here recently, you can bet people are gonna hit the bottle hard when we're losing games like this," a patron of the Logan liquor store said Saturday. "Especially when the loss is to gutter trash like New Mexico State. Now if you don't mind I'm gonna go drink until blackout and hopefully forget this miserable evening." One bright side of the alcohol sales spike was that one Aggie fan won $3,000 in the Idaho Lottery during a trip to La Tienda to buy Idaho beers.

Refining the home-field advantage

Since a dominant crowd at Romney is still a work in progress, we're going to continue to try and establish some gameday traditions each game in here.

Third Downs - First home game a bunch of us started holding up three fingers every third down. This should keep happening, along with a lot of noise while the Aggies are on defense.

Throwing your friends in the air - This one caught on pretty well first game. The more the merrier of this after USU touchdowns.

First downs on offense - There's been the standard "And that's another Aggie 'FIRST DOWN'" forever. Some of us have been holding our arms in the air similar to The Scotsman for this and pointing the direction of the first down.

Bull Sheet scouting report

A Game Preview

After a slow start to the season where they scored just 41 points over their first three games, Nevada has exploded for 1,284 yards in the past two weeks resulting in 100 points scored in their victories over UNLV and La Tech. The key match-up of the game will likely be the Aggies' No. 106 ranked rush defense versus Nevada's rush offense that is the best in the nation. Unless the Aggies can find a way to slow down the Wolfpack's running game, it could be a long day for USU. Likewise for Nevada, whose pass defense is ranked No. 113, it could potentially be a long day if Utah State's No. 43 ranked pass offense can get into a rhythm. Possibly the biggest X-factor of the game is which Nevada team shows up to play as they have been the tale of two teams this season from their early losses to their current two-game win streak. Nevada has also traditionally struggled on the road, which could make this game all the more interesting for a Utah State team that is looking to bounce back and make a statement after last week's embarrassing last-second loss to New Mexico State.

In the next "Bull Sheet" ...

- Louisiana Tech continues to be the least interesting school in the entire WAC
- Robert Turbin's birthday to be recognized as University holiday.
- Three BYU players suspended from school for watching 'Family Guy'.

Know Thy Enemy

#10 - Colin Kaepernick Jr. - Quarterback

Nevada quarterback Colin Kaepernick entered the 2009 season as the reigning WAC Offensive Player of the Year after throwing for 2,849 yards and 22 touchdowns last season while gaining 1,130 yards on the ground to go with 17 rushing touchdowns. He became just the fifth quarterback in the history of NCAA Division-1A (FBS) to throw for more than 2,000 yards and rush for more than 1,000 in the same season. So far this season Kaepernick has thrown for 920 yards with six touchdowns and four interceptions to go with 384 rushing yards and three rushing touchdowns. He is currently being projected as a possible 3rd round draft pick for the 2011 NFL draft. He was also drafted as a pitcher in the 43rd round of the 2009 Major League Baseball draft by the Chicago Cubs.

RBs Vai Taua and Luke Lippincott - Taua and Lippincott represent Nevada's two-headed monster at the running back position. After Lippincott was the WAC's leading rusher in 2007 he suffered a season-ending injury in Nevada's second game of the 2008 season. Taua then stepped into the starting role and proceeded to lead the WAC in rushing for 2008. This season the two of them are splitting carries for what is the nation's No. 1 rushing offense. They have combined to rush for 709 yards while reaching the end-zone three times total between the two of them. Freshman Mike Ball has also pitched in 201 yards and five TD's.
