Bull Sheet scouting report A game preview

Yes, we really beat them 47-2 the last time they were here, and yes, we really lost to them last year in what I think many people remember primarily as the "holy s* just give the ball to Turbin on 3rd down" game.

Not to be too overly critical of the offensive play calling in this issue, but it is indeed currently a concern. Dave Baldwin's offense works, and rather well when it's actually spread out and opened up.

Simply put, if Utah State opens things up today, it could be a repeat of the dominance we saw in that 47-2 game two years ago. If not, this one will likely be a game throughout three quarters or so.

New Mexico State currently ranks at No. 113 in total offense and No. 115 in total defense.

In other words, they really really suck, and if Utah State brings the same offense to Romney Stadium that put up 42 points in the second half against Nevada, this game will never be close.

Sadly, that second half against Nevada was the first time our Aggies have looked at all like a good football since the win over BYU, and it's been a loooooong month since then if you're a football fan. It'd be nice to remember what it feels like to dominate the hell out of a team again.

In the next Bull Sheet...

- Robert Turbin fulfills the prophecy of the one who will bring balance to The Force.
- Girls on USU campus continue boycott of Bull Sheet staff while never requiring flyers to get the message across.
- Final home game for Bull Sheet founder/ That asshole who's always yelling in front, a.k.a. Fafner.... Yeah, I'm finally graduating.

on the season, these flyers popped up all around the NMSU campus and around town in that hell-hole that we know as Las Cruces.

While the flyer itself is mind-blowing enough, what with the detailed graphic on the right that is blacked out and the straight forward choice in language, the concept is equally intriguing.

Really, did this information and idea have to be presented in the form of flyers around campus??? Is there really that big of a line of girls waiting to get with football players at New Mexico State? Could a simple mass-text not have done the job? Or maybe a couple similar status updates on Facebook conveying this idea?

But then again, this is the same university that bails a player out of jail so he can suit up that night, and suspends a player for only one game for passing out drunk behind the wheel of a car (at the age of 19).

God bless you New Mexico State. You never seem to let us down.

While you were at The Howl, the offense threw up 42 in one half

I hate to be the guy in the media (if you'd call this media) who is pointing fingers at members of the team or coaching staff, but seriously Dave Baldwin... What the hell!?!?!?

Two of Utah State's four highest point totals this season have come in games against a top-25 opponent in Oklahoma and Nevada. Was it a "nothing to lose" mentality that contributed to this? Why is it that the offense (which was the No. 12 best offense in the country last year) is able to move the ball and put up points against defenses like Oklahoma, but Louisiana Tech and San Diego State stuff everything we put out there.

Again, not to be "finger pointing media guy", but Baldwin's play calling against the non-power teams has been suspect at best. Open the offense up for hell's sake and trust the system in which you coach. The team is better off for it, and at the very least you could effectively utilize Di-ondre Borel, who, if you haven't noticed, is about as good as any quarterback in the country when the offense lets him do his thing. Rant over.

It's very simple, you write mean things about visiting teams (see below), and try to coordinate some ideas with the crowd. There's not much else to it. So one of you reading this, e-mail the_refraction@hotmail.com and put your name into consideration.

Somebody with a piece of paper and too much time on their hands has to say, it would be a shame to The Bull Sheet just wither and die after only two seasons. So one of you freshman or sophomores out there need to step up and take this thing over next season.

Seriously, this stuff could not be made up. And seriously, only New Mexico St.

What you see pictured above was a campus-wide effort put forth by female (we hope) students to boycott any and all sexual relations with the New Mexico State football players until they actually won a game.

Sorry to throw something so explicit in such an upstanding newsletter such as this, but really, when news like this falls into your lap, you've got to capitalize on it.

To give the quick rundown, after New Mexico State's 59-0 loss to Boise State to drop them to 0-4

For real, somebody has got to take this thing over next year.

Two seasons in, and just when it seems like a person or two might actually care what

Things you will never overhear at a New Mexico State home football game

- "The team looks great this year!"
- "I just love the beautiful scenery surrounding this stadium."
- "This crowd is insane!"
- "Touchdown Aggies"
- "That's one classy looking female."
- "No, my house isn't a trailer."
