In All Honesty: A game preview

Morehead State, much like USU, returns most of their talent from an NCAA Tournament team of a year ago. The Eagles won the Ohio Valley Conference tournament and the NCAA Tournament's play-in game before falling to No. 1 seed Louisville in the first round of the big dance. They enter this season as a co-favorite to win their conference behind preseason OVC Player of the Year Kenneth Faried's 16.8 points and 13 rebounds per game. It might be fair to say that the Eagles have not yet lived up to expectations this year as they are just 4-4 in what isn't a very tough schedule. Just two of those four wins have come against a Division-1 teams in wins over Tennessee-Martin and East Tennessee State. In a nutshell, they don't protect the ball well, typically don't shoot well and besides Faried do not have anybody else who has put up decent numbers in rebounding. All of these weaknesses do not really bode well for the Eagles as they are playing a top-notch defensive team in a tough environment, versus a team looking to prove their prowess.

Morehead State once again leads nation in name-innuendo.

For the 119th time in 122 years, Morehead State University has won a national poll as the school with the most innuendo included in it's name. "While it might be a bit juvenile to still be giggling about the name 'Morehead State', we are happy to again receive this honor as it brings attention to our school we might not have otherwise received," said University President Wayne Andrews.

This is the 44th straight year that Morehead State has won the title after a two-year lull in which Oral Roberts University won the title after their school opened up, marking the only time MSU went more than one year without winning the poll.

"Oral Roberts won those two titles in 63' and 64' back when their name was new and sexy," Andrews said. "We're also still in dispute over the Moorhead State in Minnesota winning the vote in 1929. The ballots were misprinted to not even include our name, and lets be honest, 'Morehead' is way funnier than 'Moorhead.'"

UVSC has long and sore ride home

The bus ride home from UVSC's Dec. 12 beatdown by the hands of Utah State left Wolverine leading-scorer Jordan Swarbrick with a very uncomfortable problem. The senior forward spent the two-hour bus ride, and most of the rest of that evening with a sharp pain in his backside after Utah State's Pooh Williams spent the duration of that night's game breaking his foot off in Swarbrick's ass. While the entire UVSC squad was hurting from their 87-56 slaughter suffered by the hand of Utah State, Swarbrick got the worst of it as he shot a measly 1-6 for just six points while Williams repeatedly abused Swarbrick for 15 points in the game, including shooting 3-4 from 3-point range. Swarbrick wasn't the only person from UVSC hurting from the loss either. UVSC's "MAWL" student section also were seen suffering from massive cases of denial and shame from getting a 31-point loss shoved in their face and having to go home to their town and school which is still unfortunately in Orem.

The Refraction's "Where Anarchy Happens" T-shirts now available!!!

In case you didn't know, we here at The Refraction have been making t-shirts since about this time last year. Our original "Fully intended to leave you offended" design is still available to go along with our new design, "Where anarchy happens". We've also tweaked our logo a little bit to include the anarchy style "A". The shirts are $10, and every bit of the .30 cents or so that we make off of them will go straight to contributing to printing costs! If you would like one of these shirts, send us an e-mail to the_refraction@hotmail.com with the style of shirt you would like as well as what size you need. It could take a bit for us to get it to you as they've been selling fast and we may need to include your shirt on our next order of shirts, but you'll get it.

The Petri Dish - The school whose name leads the nation in innuendo.

Team - Were picked as co-favorites to win the Ohio Valley Conference along with Murray State University. In their first of two meetings with Murray State this year they fell victim to a 30-point slaughter by the hand of their conference co-favorites.

#2 Jamel Marshall - You can find him on Myspace at "www.myspace.com/nba_bound_babysaq_34" ... His career high is 0 points.

#3 Aaron Williams - Looks an awful lot like a young Gary Coleman in his picture on Morehead State's athletics website.

#5 Rashad Hosea - Probably has the most profane twitter account in the history of teh interwebz. Here is a sample: "People are really doing too much. That sh*t is irritating I tried to be polite but f*ck that nice sh*t." Extra effort of unkindness to be made on his behalf by Section F this evening.

#13 Ty Proffitt - Transfer from Notre Dame.

#33 Jason Beharie - From England. We'd ask that any and all heckling directed at him be done so in a British accent.

#35 Kenneth Faried - His profile on MSU's website has about a paragraph long section that is mostly just gushing about his basketball talents, motivation and achievements as a player. Nobody else got one of those on their profiles, leaving us to wonder what makes him so freaking special. His assist-to-turnover ratio is a less-than stellar one assist for every five turnovers

#45 Les Simmons - Thanks to his teammate Kenneth Faried, is amazingly only second worst on the team in assist-to-turnover ratio with a 1/5 average.
